Hi all, Im deb, im 36yo and I am from Philly. I am an ICU veterinary nurse. In the past few years I have become quite a follower of court cases. After watching the Zimmerman trial this past year, I have had extensive conversations with my father, who is an attorney. With our discussions of the law, became even more discussion of politics which somehow led me to start asking questions about the constitution. I decided then that I wanted to start from the beginning and not only read but understand the most critical document that not only this country but this world has ever known. I feel that a large percentage of Americans have absolutely no idea what the backbone of this country even says, yet they will stand there and say, "well my 2nd amendment right says I can carry a gun." But when I've asked those people to tell me what exactly does that amendment say, word for word, they have no clue. Im ready to try and understand it.

Hi, deb. I used to live in Philly but moved back across the state to Pittsburgh, my hometown. I am taking the course for the same reason you are--to gain a better understanding of a document which affects our daily lives, is misinterpreted, misunderstood and maligned by many fellow citizens. Although I went to a private school as a kid, a very prestigious university and medical school, I received very little formal education about this document which every US citizen should know a great deal about-- especially in today's political climate. Enjoy the course! glad to meet you.
